PEACE: A PREREQUISITE OF PUBLIC HEALTH

Leveraging the opportunities of an online meeting to lift up voices on the front lines of global militarization and domestic policing

For the past 35 years, the Peace Caucus has served to make visible, as expressed in APHA's 2009 policy statement, that "war has profound public health consequences, and it is an entirely preventable source of some the world's worst public health catastrophes."

This year's online meeting provided us with the unique opportunity to lift up voices from around the globe whose work is at the intersection of war, conflict, violence, and public health, and who otherwise would have been unable to attend the meeting. We urge you to take advantage of our extraordinary program, which brings to the forefront of the annual meeting the connections between violence and public health in Africa, Yemen, Syria, and in the U.S., exploring the health consequences of structural violence, and its relationship to racism, social injustice, and war. Please make the most of this unprecedented opportunity by attending the Peace Caucus sessions.

While violence prevention is the theme of this year's annual meeting, it is the theme of every annual meeting for the Peace Caucus. Please learn more about the work of the Peace Caucus by attending our business meeting, and support the work of the Peace Caucus by joining at: <https://www.aphapeacecaucus.org>.

APHA To Vote on Policies Calling for the Abolition of Nuclear Weapons & Ending Support for War in Yemen

Let your support be heard at the Joint Policy Committee Hearings HELD ONLINE PRIOR TO THE CONFERENCE
Tuesday Oct. 20th, 4-6 PM MT <https://apha.confex.com/apha/2020/meetingapp.cgi/Session/60959>

Towards A Nuclear Free World: A Goal More Relevant than Ever to Health and Human Survival

This year marked the 75th anniversary of the U.S. bombings of Japan with nuclear weapons, an attack that killed close to a quarter million people by the end of 1945. Remembrance is inseparable from recognition that nuclear weapons are not yet history. They are still here. The threat of nuclear war is real and growing. As of April 2020, there were approximately 13,410 nuclear weapons in the world held by 9 countries. In 2019, these 9 countries spent $72.9 billion dollars on nuclear weapons, more than $138,000 a hour. These costs are primarily based on the cost of warheads and delivery systems and development alone to permit comparison across nations. Other estimates that include verifiable costs of all nuclear programs that would not be spent if nuclear weapons did not exist, calculate the true costs of nuclear weapons in 2020 in the U.S. alone to be on the order of $67.595 billion.

Total 2019 spending: $72.9 billion

There is no end in sight.

According to the U.S. Congressional Budget Office, the U.S. plans to spend an estimated $1.2 trillion, approximately $4 million an hour, to upgrade and modernize its nuclear weapons and delivery systems over the next 30 years. Cleanup, an illusory concept, is also expensive; the complete remediation costs were estimated to be $50-60 billion in 2004. Clearly these expenditures could instead be used to address major deficiencies in U.S. and global public health infrastructure and access to healthcare, revealed most recently by the COVID-19 pandemic. Moreover, every link in the chain of nuclear weapons production creates social inequities and injustices.

Public Health Thought Experiment

What are the costs of nuclear weapons to your community? You can calculate that at this link.

Want to imagine what you could buy for public health instead? You can explore that at this link.

Brink, there are stepwise, readily achievable measures leading to the ultimate abolition of nuclear weapons that we can demand.

APHA has formally recognized, for at least four decades, the direct and indirect adverse public health consequences of nuclear weapons research, development, testing, production, and use, and has also explicitly recognized the essential role of public health professionals in advancing the abolition of nuclear weapons. To address the ever-present threat, a policy statement on nuclear weapons, “Towards A Nuclear Free World” will be voted on by APHA’s Governing Council at the annual meeting. This policy statement provides an update to the evidence in support of APHA’s past policy statements and reaffirms APHA’s call for the abolition of nuclear weapons.

The policy statement is sponsored by the Peace Caucus and the International Health and Occupational Health and Safety Sections and was developed in collaboration with Physicians for Social Responsibility. To date, it has been endorsed by the Asian and Pacific Islander Caucus for Public Health, Injury Control and Emergency Health Services, Student Assembly. We invite you to log onto zoom on Tuesday October 20th at 4-6PM MT to voice your support of this policy statement at the Joint Policy Committee Public Hearings.

In 2019, nuclear-armed states spent $138,699 a minute on nuclear weapons.

Conflict and health

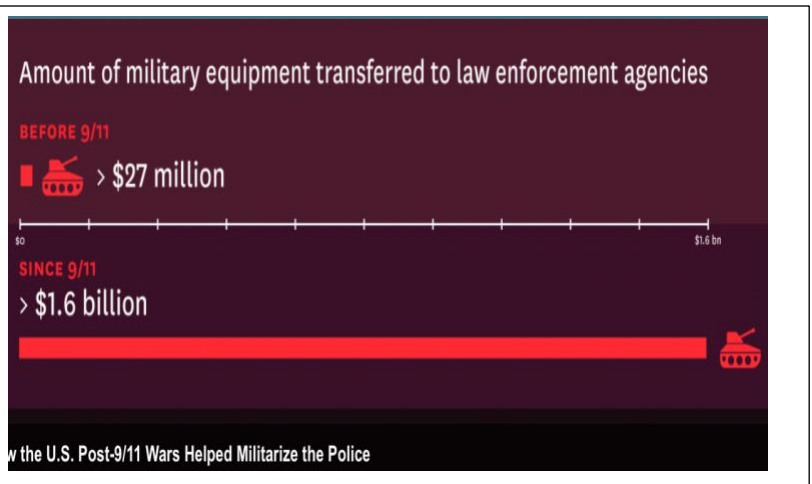

Armed conflict is a prominent public health problem. Beyond direct casualties and injuries, armed conflict disrupts systems of public health and social cohesion, creating displacement, unemployment, and poverty – with long-term consequences that are both immediate and intergenerational. In addition, conflict and displacement have a tremendous impact on the mental health of the affected populations.
